

We successfully completed all of the above deliverables over the course of this sprint. This was achieved through consistent standup meetings and check-ins where group members would give updates about their progress and any issues they had encountered. We found this to be an effective method during the last two sprints and managed to continue it for this sprint as well. If there was something that a group member was stuck on, bringing it up during the meeting or putting it into our group discord server ensured that the other members were aware and would do their best to try to help overcome the issue. This sprint, many of the tasks were not dependent on each other. This was a positive because it resulted in minimal waiting around until someone else had completed a task. Moving forward, we will try to continue this practice, but if it is not possible to have entirely independent tasks,
